Workshop signal cards for children and young people.

This box contains 11 cards designed to help participants to express common needs that might arise during a design or research workshop.

These cards allow participants to flag a need or want without verbalising or drawing attention to themselves.

As part of your consent and ground-rules setting at the start of your session, show participants how to use them.

Spread the cards on a table within easy reach, ideally where if used, they do not draw attention to the participant (multiple sets are needed in large groups).

Participants can touch or point to a card to indicate to the facilitator a need or want that needs addressing.

Note: We always welcome feedback on our resources. Should you wish to share any reflections or suggestions please email us at:
